

Call for Papers

The Journal of Psychosocial Nursing and Mental Health Services is seeking clinical practice, research, literature review, and short commentaries on psychosocial and mental health-related topics, including:

- Adult, adolescent, and child treatment issues
- Aging
- Community mental health
- Cyberbullying
- Diversity and inclusion
- Engagement
- Ethical issues
- Evidence-based practice
- Family/caregivers
- Hospice and palliative care
- Integrated care (mental health and primary care)
- Inpatient/acute care treatment environments
- Intimate partner violence
- Leadership and administration
- LGBTQ issues
- Lived experience of mental illness
- Models of care
- Nursing education
- Parenting
- Peer specialists/counselors
- Policy and politics
- Safety/security
- Social media/gaming
- Telehealth
- Trauma/disaster-related care
- Veterans and military health
- Violence

The Journal provides practical, peer-reviewed articles for mental health nurses in clinical, academic, and research positions. The Journal, which began in 1963, has been in publication for more than 50 years. It has an impact factor rating of 0.725 and is indexed in MEDLINE/PubMed.

With the convenient online submission via Editorial Manager and a quick turnaround time from acceptance to publication, dissemination of your work is timely. Virtually all published papers are eligible for the Article of the Year award, which recognizes the best-written article published.

For more information regarding specific article types and manuscript submission, please refer to the Information for Authors, available at <http://www.healio.com/psychiatry/journals/jpn/submit-an-article>.

Submit your paper today!